

Heads up: Empty the Nest's biggest sale ever

One of the questions I'm most often asked by blog readers, twitter followers and friends is "which thrift store has the best selection of furniture?" And most often, my recommendation is to hit up estate or garage sales. Except for this weekend...this weekend, my advice for those of you on the hunt for furniture, would be to head to Empty the Nest's weekend-long blow-out, "the biggest sale we've ever had," according to Co-owner Kris Youn. "We have the most inventory of any sale we've done...furniture is stacked on top of furniture up to the ceiling!" This over-abundance of stock has forced the Empty the Nest-ers to slash prices to crazy low levels. Like how low? $200 for high-end, mint condition leather couches, vintage steamer trunks for $50, end tables and stools for $20 or less. This sale has a special emphasis on seasonal items, too, so if you're looking for vintage lawn furniture, wicker porch sets, planters, plant stands, lawn and garden accessories, etc, you're in luck. The ephemera collector in me is super excited too about their collection of photos, paper, postcards and posters—all vintage. There truly is something for everyone at their events.

But don't take my word for it...see for yourself!
